

PAIB Seminar on Fraud Prevention and the Role of Forensic Accounting

About the topic

Forensic accounting uses the disciplines of accounting, law and investigation to assist businesses in mitigating risk, gathering evidence for dispute resolution and investigating business irregularities, in a variety of situations. Fraud prevention is also an increasingly important area of work for forensic accountants, particularly in emerging markets. So what can businesses do to reduce the risk of irregularities occurring, safeguard key assets and protect their reputations from damaging revelations? This seminar will cover the following issues:

- Overview: Fraud and corruption – the concerns and impact on the business
- Key challenges in the Asian environment
- Recent enforcement trends
- Case studies and experience sharing
- Key lessons
