

Resolve Disputes by Using Alternative Dispute Resolution

Programme Code: S110627S

Currently, the common way to resolve conflicts or disputes is often by litigation, which may be disproportionately costly and protracted. There are in fact other Alternative Dispute Resolution ("ADR") mechanisms, which are more time and cost effective, to resolve disputes effectively and efficiently and serve the purpose of relationship preservation and restoration.

While it is now not only by law in Hong Kong to use mediation as the preferred method to resolve most civil disputes (i.e. Practice Direction 31), mediation is also being recognised as an effective means to resolve society and workplace conflicts, and more importantly to enhance society's harmony and productivity.

This seminar will cover the following:

- What are ADR, arbitration and mediation?
- Civil Justice Reform ("CJR"), Practice Direction 31 ("PD-31") and the process
- Latest development of ADR
- Sharing of mediation skills and demonstration
