Lunch Seminar

The legislative proposals on insolvent trading

About the topic

To give directors an appropriate incentive either to initiate corporate rescue, or to put the company in a form of insolvency proceeding at an early stage of their company's financial problems, a typical corporate rescue law often provides for a civil offence that penalises a director who failed to appropriate and prompt actions. In the same vein, the Hong Kong government has proposed to introduce insolvent trading as part of the long-awaited legislative package on provisional supervision.

At this seminar, Dr. Davy Wu of the Hong Kong Baptist University will explain the basic design of insolvent trading and point out the areas that demand reconsideration. He will share his view on:

- > structure of the proposed insolvent trading
- solvency test
- > statutory defences
- > current status on legislation of insolvent trading
